(c) Mr Fraser s reply

Mr Fraser begged to thank the President for his kind speech and the Pandits for their complimentary verses The connection of himself and Mrs Fraser with the Maha rani s College had been one so fruitful in interest and so free from all labor that they deserved no thanks, at any rate they could agree with Mr Madhava Rao when he said they were likely to keep up their interest in the institution hereafter Wherever it might be their fate to go, whether in British India or Native States, they were not likely to find an institution quite like the Maharani s College, Mysore He was particularly glad to think that it was during his connection with the Committee that the Reso lution was passed admitting Native Christians The ex ample of the open door here set was one which should have a wide influence elsewhere, for the decision to extend the benefits of the College to women irrespective of caste and creed owed its value to the fact that it was proposed and seconded by the learned and orthodox Sastry Members of the Committee themselves For the English and Christian Members to have pressed such a matter would have done more harm than good, but the spontaneous method in which this liberal policy emanated from gentle-men whose orthodoxy and religious learning were above suspicion was a just matter for pride to the College

Mr Fraser concluded by wishing all success to the College under the able guidance of its present accomplished Lady Superintendent Miss Palethorpe and its veteran Secretary Mr A Narasim Iyengar

III Proposed by Mr Fraser and seconded by Mr V N Narasimiengar that Mr and Mrs MacKenochie become members of the Committee

Resolved that the Government be requested to appoint them members of the Committee for the management of the Maharani s College
